Grateful for an Amazing Year

Patient Dinner at Carmine's in DC, October 2024

Each year CSRF sees new growth, fresh research, improving statistics, and better opportunities to advocate. Challenges also prevent themselves all the time, and growth can be uncomfortable. A healthy dose of faith is required to achieve some goals, and when you have a lot of high-level goals, it calls for some group faith!

In 2018 I was “handed the keys” when our Founder retired, and I agreed to keep driving toward our mission:

To Share: knowledge and resources

To Aid: with science-backed data and oversight by some of the best researchers and specialists in the Cushing's space

To Care: because there's nothing like another person who's been through this when you REALLY need to talk about it.

A big question was - what next? Keep it steady, or go big? What would “go big” look like, and would anyone support it? But here we are six years later and you have all continuously backed me up when I put ideas out there. Things I felt from my own experience, things I was seeing and hearing from others, and you've all been right there saying YES, this is what we experience too. Believing in the value of chaotically collected quality of life data and willing to fill out 150+ question surveys more than once. Stepping up to contribute skills and time and love to make what we're doing more successful.

We end 2024 with a bigger team than we've ever had and a full schedule of events and offerings next year, our 30th anniversary. It's been quite a journey from 1995, and we're thrilled to be here with you building a future.

The back of this page has some new opportunities for 2025. We can't wait to get it started with you.

THANK YOU!

-Leslie Edwin, President

Oh yeah.....we're hiring!
